

We will always talk and write way more than we code

We read and study the best books across cultures and time, whereas we hardly ever read good code

We really only get exposed to bad code because we usually don't have to read good code because good code is so quick and easy to read